

Not your typical summer experience

Not your typical "summer volunteer tourism" experience either. Let's face it, a Canadian student spending a few weeks or months in Africa is not going to eradicate poverty. This is not a short jaunt to a developing country to "do some development" and spread some first-world ideas that we think must be the perfect solution to ending poverty. No. This is development that puts those living in poverty first. Where listening and learning from people is key. Where our own preconceptions are not welcome. A humble approach to development. An approach dedicated to actually changing lives for greater well-being. • EWB is looking for the very best of Canadian university students for its summer 2010 Junior Fellowship program. A life-changing summer-long experience.

Working with a partner NGO in a developing African country. Living in rural African villages. Developing an on-the-ground critical understanding of development. Bringing that back to Canada to help Canadians learn how our actions can change to help those living in poverty. • This is not going to eradicate poverty. But it's part of a revolution of sustainable human-centered development, where EWB Junior Fellows play a critical role. And if you're still reading this, you could be just who we're looking for.

A life-changing 4-month overseas volunteer experience, Summer 2010.

Applications are available online at usask.ewb.ca/juniorfellowship and are due October 23rd, 2009. Visit our website or email juniorfellow@usask.ewb.ca for more information.

The EWB Junior Fellowship

in International Development

engineers without borders
ingénieurs sans frontières
Canada

University of Saskatchewan Chapter

HUMILITY. LEADERSHIP. LEARNING.
CREATING CHANGE.